WORKPLACE ELECTRICAL SAFETY (CSA STANDARD Z462) AND ARC FLASH AWARENESS

The Canadian Standards Association (CSA) established a standard in 2008 providing guidance on safety management systems, safe work procedures and the selection of personal protective equipment for any person exposed to hazards associated with energized electrical equipment. This course also specifically addresses issues related to arc blasts including boundaries and conducting an arc flash hazard analysis.

Who should take this course?

This course will assist individuals who work in and around energized electrical equipment. NOTE: It is also highly recommended that anyone taking this course first complete Link2eLearning's Electrical Safety online course as a prerequisite.
